This chapter discusses the molecular dynamics (MD) and spectroscopy. Molecular systems are characterized by the existence of groups of atoms strongly bound together making molecular units, these units being bound together through much weaker forces to form the solid.

The reaction dynamics of excited electronic states in nucleic acid bases is a key process in DNA photodamage. Recent ultrafast spectroscopy experiments have shown multicomponent decays of excited uracil and thymine, tentatively assigned to nonadiabatic transitions involving multiple electronic states.

Abstract. Molecular dynamics (MD) simulations combined with temperature-dependent IR spectroscopic measurements were used to study phase transitions in molecular crystals of the mesogenic diol 4,4'-bis(11-hydroxy-1-undecyloxy)biphenyl.
